disguised language with respect to taxation and expenditure. The issue would then be put before the country in its true bearings.

It would be then seen, we suspect, that the real difficulty in the way of a Finance Minister is the resolution of every man in the House who possesses a country constituency, to obtain for them something which they have no right to receive, and to obtain it at the expense of the colony at large.

Those who want places and those who want tribes will combine together. There lurks, however, behind all these contentions for the largest share, a menace to the freedom of commerce. The squatters can only be subject to taxation as they form part of the community at large, at least for some time to come, and they will probably unite their forces with the other country members to impose the burdens of country works upon large cities and towns who pay heavy municipal rates.

This can only be done by adding to the revenue through the Customs. Then comes the question whether the addition shall be made on articles of which the squatters are large consumers, and under pretence of saving the "poor man," impose tremendous charges upon every article he consumes under the pretence of protection.

It is by such a slow and painful process that we have to arrive at anything like a settlement of financial affairs. In the meantime the fall of rain in the interior, if it is not sufficient to satisfy the want, a never-ending affliction, very marked and effective relief. The feeling of commerce is at least improved, and if the harvest should reward the husbandman, and the stock should be preserved from disease, the increase of wealth may enable us to bear the consequences of many years' public extravagance.

In ancient Governments everything is subject to the control and influence of the supreme power. In colonial communities the Government only bears the same relation to the general interest that a knocker or bell does to a house. Were both to disappear for a month or two it might be inconvenient, but it would not be dangerous—except in case of fire or invasion.

The Ministry of the colony of Victoria have been compelled to bow, if not to win, yet to law. It has been a spectacle well worth watching—the gradual development of illegal government—and we hope we may now say its collapse.

The Assembly chose to usurp all the powers of the State by keeping in office men who took their authority from its resolutions alone, and who were supported in every illegal deed by a majority of its members. By this authority they levied illegal taxes. They invented a scheme by which they became possessed of the public money, and through fictitious loans and by sham actions, illegally appropriated it.

They attempted by threats to close against the merchants the courts of law; they set at naught the unanimous decision of the Supreme Court; they obtained in this course the sanction of the Queen's Representative; but the writing was on the wall, and they became frightened at the silent submission of the people. It would be an instructive page in the history of responsible government if the discussions which have taken place in the Executive Council could be reported to the public.

It would be curious to know in what form these gentlemen proposed to each other the steps which they severally took, and of which they jointly approved: in what way they discussed the test of statesmanship, namely, the next step forward; how, upon one act being accomplished, its consequences were to be met by another, and so on until they came to the final move by which all was to be perfected, or else rendered nugatory and vain. Did they think that the Legislative Council would surrender its authority? Human nature is sufficiently base, but it is difficult for men to perpetrate business with the eyes of the world upon them.

The Legislative Council might not have been liable to tampering at first, but it became tolerably certain it would be open to no such influence when once the world had been called upon to see the conflict. The members have held firm to their pledges. They have refused to accept a measure which was intended to deprive them of their legal and constitutional power, and they have stood with folded arms and allowed the Ministry to run its course of illegality until it has come to nearly its last stage.

It is possible that the law officers of this Government could have told their colleagues where they were going, or is it possible that any men acquainted with the working of British institutions could have any doubt? How far are we to attribute their proceedings to stupidity of mind or to that reckless wilfulness which leads men to dare any consequences, providing they do not affect their own fortunes or their own liberty? Then what would be the position of a Governor discussing with his Ministry the evasion of the law—the defiance of its clearest injunctions—the invention of sham processes—the threatening of suitors? We may give him credit for having some doubt of the safety of this course; and perhaps we must now ascribe the collapse of the Ministers to the clearer view he has obtained of the gulf which lies beneath his own feet. The time may have come when he will proceed no further in this course of illegal government, which, if England remains England, and constitutional principles are not utterly abandoned, will cost him his place.

The value of the conflict lies in this—that it has established the fact that no single organ in the State can under the British Government bear down the rest, or deprive men of constitutional protection, if only those who wield the rest of these powers are true, or if one only be true to its charge. It was in the power of the GOVERNOR to have saved the Constitution. It was in the power of the Upper House to have saved it. The Supreme Court could give it shelter. It was in the power of the Lower House to have respected the rights of others, even while maintaining its own. But the resolution of any one of these powers was sufficient to defeat the conspiracy of the rest. It may be hoped that the recollection of this conflict will have its effect for all future time. The practice of always bending to what is called the popular will is the greatest political cowardice. The popular will is but the effervescence of popular ignorance and impatience until after it has undergone a long resistance and refinement; and it is to secure some such process that these checks and counter-checks are invented by the authors of every free Constitution. If those who are interested in sound and good government will only stand firm to their posts—refuse all compromise which is a sacrifice of clear constitutional principles—the age of a few political masters will soon exhaust itself, because they will soon come to the time when they must accept the consequences of a clearly illegal and revolutionary course, or succumb to the authority which resides in intelligence, prudence, and courage. There was a danger that if the Ministry had come victorious out of this conflict, there would have been nothing to protect the people from the violence of the Assembly—nothing to shield the Judges from its aggressions.

nothing to permit the smallest freedom of discussion—which indeed is already far too much at its mercy. Every true and intelligent friend of liberty will rejoice that there is a power in the State, and that it may lean on the Royal support which can meet any other organisation, legislative, judicial, or Executive, with a distinct and resolute negative.

The question of the Tariff, to carry which all this violence has been perpetrated in vain, will doubtless be resumed in another session, and it may be hoped that the discussion will place its merits in their proper light. We do not at all discuss the question whether, after the repeated expression of a deliberate opinion on the subject of taxation, it may not be proper for the Upper House to give way, providing always that it protect property from wanton aggression and public credit from danger. If it pleases the great majority of the people after fair trial to adopt a bad system of public finance the remedy must be sought from their future experience and not in a resistance which, leaving every thing unsettled, may be more mischievous than temporary consent.

It should, however, always be the effort of the Legislative Council to prevent wholesale changes, and to temper innovations with such compensating provisions as the practice of other countries may suggest. Nothing, indeed, is more striking, would be more laughable if it were considered separate from its mischief, than the proneness of our countrymen to fall back upon centuries in legislation, and to repeat exploded doctrines which the ancient nations of Europe have consigned to the cabinet of antiquities and catalogued with fossil remains.

THE OUTGOING MAIL.—As the mail steamer Ellora did not leave Melbourne until 11 o'clock a.m. yesterday, there is little probability of the English letters being delivered in time to reach answers by the outgoing mail, which will close to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock.

With a view to affording an opportunity for replying by the Bombay, the Postmaster-General communicated yesterday with the Manager of the Australian Steam Navigation Company, to know whether he would be charged with the duty of despatching a steamer on Thursday to convey a reply to the mail to the steamer at Melbourne. The sum that was asked for this service was, however, considered to be unreasonable, being considerably in excess of what was formerly paid under similar circumstances, and the negotiation consequently fell through.

On a previous occasion Sir John Young refused to authorise the detention of the mail steamer, which was to do so, to the detriment of the mail, and the result was that the mails were sent to the English letters, considering that the instructions from the Secretary of State prohibited his interference under the circumstances. It is presumed, however, that, in the absence of any arrangements for a supplementary mail, his Excellency will not object to the postponement of the Bombay till a late hour in the evening, as the mail will not involve any delay in the departure of the steamer, and it will be a great convenience to persons residing in Sydney who desire to answer their English correspondence.

MR. S. K. SALTING.—We regret to hear that intelligence has been received of the death, in London, after a short illness, of Mr. S. K. Salting, for many years as well known in Melbourne as in London, and a firm of Flower, Salting, and Co., merchants, of this city.

THE SWEENEY ACT.—A deputation of gentlemen appeared at a meeting of ratepayers of that part of Geelong, on the 19th inst., to petition the Corporation for the removal of the Sweeney Act, which was passed in 1854, and which has since been amended by the Corporation, and which has since been amended by the Corporation, and which has since been amended by the Corporation.

The deputation consisted of Mr. Goddard, Mr. Harbottle, Mr. Woods, and Mr. Sweeney. They were received by the Mayor, Mr. Sweeney, and the Corporation, and they were received by the Mayor, Mr. Sweeney, and the Corporation, and they were received by the Mayor, Mr. Sweeney, and the Corporation.

BY THE MAIL STEAMER ROMBAH.

FROM THE 20TH OCTOBER TO 20TH NOVEMBER.

From 20th to 27th October.

Another track marked with Leichhardt's mail is now discovered by Mr. Lay on Richmond Downs. It is situated on the bank of the Flinders River, about a hundred miles to the east of Port Bowen. The finding of this track on Richmond Downs proves that Leichhardt must have followed up the river for at least one hundred miles.

On the evening of last Thursday week, a young man named Frederick Davis distinguished himself by an act of extraordinary daring in stopping the runaway horse of an omnibus. He sprang to the back of the omnibus, and, clambering over the roof into the box, the reins were gone, but dark as it was he descended to the pole, broke one of the horses, got possession of the reins, and finally stopped the horses before any harm was done.

On the 20th instant, the Sydney Tonic Sol-fa Association gave their quarterly concert, at the Masonic Hall, York-street. There was a very good attendance, the hall being comfortably filled.

Last Friday evening, a complimentary concert was given to Mr. J. W. Corder by the members of St. Mary's Choral Society in the Hall of St. Mary's Rectory.

On the 19th instant, some of the prisoners at Port Macquarie Gaol attempted to effect their escape, but were defeated by the vigilance of the officials.

About a fortnight since, a man named O'Brien, being a convict, was confined in the Port Macquarie prison, for offering violence to his wife. He was released, and endeavored to escape, but was recaptured before he had fled the town.

The drought throughout the country continues to prevail, and causes no inconsiderable anxiety.

Mr. E. S. Hill, a gentleman who has long turned his attention to the study of natural history, is of opinion that the orange-rat slate-colored rat lately discovered, is the Merisodon, one of the few non-mammals of the country.

On the 20th instant, a Chinese member of the Anglican Church, named Kong Shing Chien, left Suva for Bathurst, in order to afford Christian spiritual consolation to his two unhappy countrymen under sentence of death at Bathurst.

A literary and musical entertainment in connection with the Free Church of England, in Bourke-street, took place last night. It was a very successful one, and was attended by a large number of persons.

Mr. Daniel H. Denchey died at Bathurst on Monday morning last, between midnight and 1 o'clock a.m. He was a violent man, and was known for his violent and received severe injuries on the right side of his face. He was carried senseless to the Hospital, where he expired. His remains were buried in the Roman Catholic Cemetery, at Bathurst, on Tuesday afternoon.

The monthly meeting of the Acclimatization Society took place at the School of Arts, in Pitt-street, last Monday night. Mr. J. F. Josephson was in the chair. The secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting, and Mr. J. F. Josephson read a paper on the subject of the Acclimatization Society.

A lamentable accident happened on Board the Agnes Irving, while leaving Ullmarra, near Grafton, for Sydney, early on Friday morning. The vessel was a small schooner, and was carrying a large number of passengers.

The Government have approved of a petition for granting a new racecourse midway between Windsor and Richmond.

The Imperial Government has intimated that the "Felons Apprehension Act," passed by the Legislature of New South Wales, will be left in operation.

The second session of the fifth Parliament of New South Wales was opened on Tuesday, at noon, by His Excellency Sir John Young.

Amongst the recent deaths, not elsewhere mentioned, we have to record the following cases: On Friday morning, the 20th instant, an aged man named Robert Griffin, was found drowned in the river at Parramatta. James Sanderson, a seaman of H.M.S. Irish, was accidentally drowned near the jetty between Farm Cove and Fort Macquarie, on Sunday night, the 22nd instant. On Sunday morning last, the 23rd instant, a man named John Smith, was found drowned in the river at Parramatta. A young man named Benjamin Bryant, was drowned at the Phoenix Wharf, on Thursday. Bryant was the lamp trimmer on board the Phoenix.

The planting of sugar-cane cuttings (100,000) recently imported from Queensland, was finished on Friday, the 20th instant, at the Phoenix Park Sugar Plantation, on the Hunter. The yellow sugar variety, of which only 1200 cuttings were obtained, is spoken of with high commendation. Many of the canes had commenced to shoot on the voyage up, and are now buried in mother earth; a good fall of rain would prove very beneficial to them.

By a proclamation, it has been declared that the colony shall be divided into three Circuit Districts, called the Northern, Southern, and Western Circuit Districts, and shall henceforth be divided into six Circuit Districts, to be called the Northern, Southern, Western, Eastern, Central, and Middle Districts.

The migration from the interior of emus, turkeys, and other large birds into the more settled districts continues, evidently caused by the want of water in their more accustomed haunts. Nice large pelicans were recently seen near Burragong.

A nugget has been recently found at Dan Creek, near the junction of the Dan Creek and the Macintyre River. The nugget was found by a man named John Smith, who was working on the Dan Creek.

The annual excursion of the Sunday and day schools in connection with St. Barnabas Church, Parramatta-street, came off last Thursday at Clontarf. There were present about 850 scholars and seventy teachers, as well as upwards of 2000 friends and other visitors.

No less than 340 orders were issued at the Sydney Money Office for transmission by the late mail to the United Kingdom, for nearly two hundred in excess of the number sent by the late mail.

The above number, 320 orders were for England, 310 for Ireland, and 110 for Scotland; the total amount being £3892 3s. 2d. The increasing use that is being made of the late mail is a proof of the extending appreciation amongst the business portions of the community of this mode of forwarding small sums of money to distant friends.

On Friday, the 25th October, Captain Macleay's Report (as Agent for this colony in England) on the purchases of Railway Land for the New South Wales Government was laid on the table of the Legislative Assembly. Captain Macleay reports that he considers it beyond all doubt that the purchase of permanent water material during the period in question, the colony was seriously, faithfully, and efficiently served, and was not charged, for the material supplied, more than the cost of the material, and that the period for material of the quality obtained under the particular specifications in force.

Government has promised to grant to the City Corporation some land at the head of Darling Harbour for the erection of gas works. The land in question consists of about one and a half acres, and is situated on the south water frontage. Plans for the proposed gas-works are being prepared by the City Corporation, and, when these are finished, the pipes and other apparatus will be ordered.

A collection of curiosities from several of the Polynesian Islands, procured during the recent cruise of the Curacao, was opened for exhibition in the Anglican Church Society's Room, in Philip-street, on Tuesday last.

An extensive robbery was attempted on the premises of Mr. Thomas E. Ruff, George-street, near the site of the General Post Office, on Sunday morning last. A burglar effected an entrance into the shop and had appropriated to himself a large amount of watches and jewellery when he was apprehended by the police, brought to the spot by Mr. George Hewitt, a neighbor—whose sagacity detected the thief's attempt, and whose presence of mind caused the prompt apprehension of the criminal.

About seven days since a man of colour named "Dollar," a runaway from H.M.S. Curacao, was captured by the police near Muswellbrook. He has been sentenced to receive forty-eight lashes and two months' imprisonment.

During the past week the weather was extremely oppressive up till last Thursday afternoon. There was a grateful change, which began with a thunderstorm and was followed by a refreshing shower of rain. It continued to rain during the night, there being no reason to hope that the drought may be considered to have terminated not only on the coast but in the interior.

Mr. Hargrave, the gold discoverer, is at present at the York, where he is for the purpose of reporting upon the prospects of those gold-fields.

In the charges of assault, at Ollmore, between Messrs. B. B. Lynch, and C. G. N. Lockhart, before the Court on the 20th ultimo, Messrs. Lynch and Lockhart being Government officers the case excited great local interest. The Chief Justice bowed over the defendants to appear at Sydney, on the 27th of November, then and there to receive judgment.

created a profound sensation in Grafton, and, as far as we have been able to ascertain, all the day and night, and that only occasionally; each of the three grand rollers dove the yacht some distance towards the shore, and after they had passed the ordinary was settling in with a breeze from the south-west, and the yacht was able rapidly in the same direction; at the time I was washed off the yacht she never struck, nor had she been any risk of reef, finding myself in the surf, which was too rough to swim in, I suffered in getting rid of my clothes except my shirt, and I was carried with terrific speed on the top of successive waves towards the shore; more than twenty minutes elapsed, but on a dark ocean among the ordinary waves which break on the rocks, after having been thrown on the rocks several times and sucked back again, I succeeded in retaining my hold, and was soon rescued by Houghton Hunt, and a friend, who had been washed on shore a little further seaward; the latter was in a very exhausted condition, and had been twice rescued by Hunt; they informed me that they had seen and heard the yacht, and that they had seen and heard the yacht, and that they had seen and heard the yacht, and that they had seen and heard the yacht, and that they had seen and heard

Throughout the South Seas every group has at some time or other furnished scenes of cruelty and retaliation. But missionary influence has so far succeeded in most of those islands as to render visitors perfectly safe, and often to afford them all the refreshment which could be expected in a civilised country. We have no doubt that the natives of Tanna who have displayed a spirit so ferocious, if once brought fairly within the influence of European instruction will, from the energy of their character, be most capable of deriving improvement. Such fierce and warlike races, if once disciplined, profit most largely by the knowledge they acquire. A century has not passed since Cook lost his life at Owhyhee. What a revolution have these islands undergone! Their monarchy, recognised by the States of Europe, has now its prince

"Having myself circumnavigated the globe twice in merchant ships as well as in the command of a surveying expedition, and having travelled that delightful spot of ocean abovementioned, between England and Sydney, when induced by duty as well as inclination to state its peculiarities, I feel bound to add my mite towards attracting the attention of the public to the comparative advantages of establishing by way of the Isthmus of Darien, the principal line of communication with America."

* West India packets leave one day earlier when the preceding month has thirty-one days.

The natives, fully two hundred strong, were too well posted to be beaten, and so Captain McPherson, of the Colonial Defence Cavalry, resorted to the expedient of a feint. He rode at the enclosure as if to jump it, and then gave ground and retired as if in confusion. The larger part of the defenders on that side of the enclosure rushed out in pursuit, when he suddenly turned on them and cut down nine or ten of them before they could escape. Of course, the most filled in getting back to the camp, and the Indians, who were chiefly of the native contingent and militia volunteers, carried the place by a sudden rush, killing about a dozen of its defenders, and taking three or four of the

OVER THE HAUKAS.

We take the following from the Havcker Bay Times of the 18th October:

On the 12th instant the Hanabans evaded their position at Matata, and proceeded towards Te Toke, where they took up a strong position. The Arawaks, accompanied by the Resident Magistrate, Mr. Muir, followed on their track and arrived at Te Toke on Tuesday, the 17th instant, where they found Te Toke strongly occupied by the Haukas, who refused themselves to take the peace by offering, commenced at once to fight. At 5 p.m. on Wednesday, the rebels asked for a truce, and on the 18th, at noon, fighting commenced, and were nightfall Ngatipahau had effected LILCOX AND GIBBS' FARMER SEWING MACHINE—In 1864 it computed and received the ten prizes given for the Best Sewing Machine in the world. Its form is so simple and elastic that it is warranted not to trip in use if properly used. Every third stitch is cut. This machine can be run one way or the other, and, of two yards of cloth, it will make up a skirt, or a pair of trousers, or a simple and accurate in its construction that it will save the use of the noisy shuttle, and with one third the usual practical result of any other machine. It is without pulleys, and, and least the noise without pulleys. It will sew perfectly from the finest to the thickest material, and without alteration of tension. The highest colonial testimonial on record for its practical working, is H. HEBBLEWHITE, Esq., of Glasgow, and 202, Pitt-street.

 The water is pure, and never-dried stream of good water, is the great cause of the enormous beauty of the grounds.
 The greatest expense have been artistically laid out and skillful judgment and tasteful planning still shows of itself in the most judicious use of the land and its miniature lake in the centre fronts the surrounding domain comprises sunny glades, grassy meadows of choice trees of varied kinds, and a beautiful valley densely wooded with laurels, and studded with clumps of evergreens and flowering shrubs, and through which a pretty brook winds its way. This riverlet takes its source from the high hills very pleasing feature in the landscape. It falls into the lake by a series of romantic waterfalls, none each increasing the stream are picturesque wonder, and the water is furnished with a constant supply of and waterfalls disposed grottoes and rockeries over and waterfalls of every description. On one of the grounds are a large conservatory, a lemon orchard, and kitchen garden.
